FROM LOUISVILLE TO WASHINGTON.

(WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON,)
Sept. 12, 1866.

I rejined the Presidenshel party at Louisville, and glad I am that I did it at that pint. His Imperial Serenity had bin pleased ever since he left Chicago, or rather since he got near St. Louis, for two thirds uv Illinois was pizen and Indianapolis wuz pizener. From St. Looie the receptshuns wuz truly oborial and even enthoosiastic. We got out of the, region uv aristocrats and had come down to the hard fisted yomanry. I had holes through the hats uv men, I used whut nite be called the flag uv Democrisy wavin from behind em, which, ez they generally either had no coats at all, or, if any, they were roundabouts, wuz allus in view. I saw wimen who disdained stockings and dipped snuff, and I felt at home. I wuz among democracy. The cheerin for Grant and Farragut blused as we got into them regions, and uv the vociferous crowds half uv 'em, the younger ones, cheered Andrew Johnson, while the old veterans, them whose notes was blossomin for the tomb, cheered for Andrew Jackson. His Serenity smilingly acknowledged both, by making a speech to em and wavin his hat.

With these preliminary remarks I resoom my diary:

LOUISVILLE.—There was a magnificent demonstration here. His Imperial Majesty who was in a eggselent condition to make crowds large enough, remarked to me as we wuz ridin through the streets: "'Splen'splay! 'Mor'n ten 'undard 'tousand people—mor'n ten million people, mor'n ten 'nered million people—mor'n ten 'nered 'tousand people—and allurvium "sporters my policy. 'Rah for me!"

His Majesty undoubtedly eggsaggerated towards the last; but it is safe to put the throng down at a good many. The estimate is entirely safe. There wuz the finest display uv banners and shirts I hev seen since we started. The red, white and red wuz displayed from almost half the houses, ladies waved their handkerchiefs, ez we passed, and men cheered. A plessin' incident occurred here. I noticed one gushin

THURSDAY MORNING OCTOBER 18 1866

Consequences to the South of the Rejection of the Amendment

It is not unlikely that the rebel States trusting still to the ominous sentence of Johnsonism, will refuse to accept the constitutional amendment as the basis of restoration to their old position in the Union Texas has already formally returned that document to the State Department without other action in regard to it than of insolent contempt There are no indications to show that any of the revolted States intend even to consider the question of its ratification or rejection Meantime the loyal States are making an issue upon it and rapidly adopting it That at least twenty three of them will ratify it as a fact virtually settled Now if the rebel States refuse utterly to accept it it will be interesting to inquire, what shape under these circumstances, the problem of reconstruction will assume What may the rebels expect to get, if they do not take what is now offered them

The late speech of Thaddeus Stevens at Bedford, Pennsylvania, furnishes an answer to this question This leader, anticipating the rejection by the insurgent States of the Congressional plan, avows his intention, in that event, of returning to his original proposition of dealing with those States as though they were Territories at the disposal of the conquering power He proposes to revive his former programme, go to the bottom of the whole question in dispute, and settle it in a manner consistent with the strictest justice, and in accordance with the demands of the loyal people of the nation And there can be no doubt that if the constitutional amendment be rejected, and the Southern people spurn from them a measure so just to all parts of the country, and, considering the great crime of the rebellion, so magnanimous to those who participated in the attempt to overthrow the Government, the great Union party will unhesitatingly follow the course marked out by such men as Thaddeus Stevens; and instead of asking traitors what they will consent to take, tell them plainly what they may make up their minds to accept and submit to. The next proposition will not come in the shape of a request, but in the unmistakable language of command

What are the present State Governments of the South that have been set up at the dictation of Andrew Johnson by men who have committed the crime of treason? Not one of them is a legitimate, recognized State Government. In the celebrated Sharkey letter, written in August 1865 the President himself described their nature and their status He declared then that the recognition of Congress was necessary to legitimate them At that time he did not pretend that these Governments were the old ones revived He knew then, and the country still remembers that these new Governments were of his creation. While the act was recent he did not undertake to say, that it was lawful, and that it concluded the work of reconstruction But he now demands that Congress shall accept his work as final and regard as legitimate and permanent those Governments which at the time of their organization he said were provisional only Now those Governments can be legalized; but nothing but the power of Congress can do it No intimate relations between them and the Government of the Union have yet been established, nor can be until Congress chooses to recognize them That they are not the old governments that existed before secession is evident, for these were overthrown by the rebellion, and at its close Johnson compelled the States to take new Constitutions Many of his friends in the South assert that these State Governments are not legal The Chief Justice of North Carolina says that the so called Constitution of that State "is no Constution, because your Convention was not a legitimate Convention and had no power to make a Constitution for us or to alter that we had and have. Johnson required a Convention to perform certain specific acts The pretense on was without a parallel or precedent. The people have a right to make their own Constitution, and not be made subject to one imposed by force or fraud, or by an extraneous power." Now if North Carolina's relations with the Union were not disturbed by the rebellion, her Chief Justice is right If Johnson's doctrine shall be accepted, there is no power to prevent the revolted States from returning to their old Constitutions, which they will take the very earliest occasion to do If those States never ceased to be sovereign—and according to Johnson's doctrine they did not—his ordering them to amend their Constitutions was sheer usurpation Congress, indeed, has power to legalize them, but it likewise has the power to withhold recognition It can also erect other State Governments, so they be republican in form, and make them the legitimate Governments of the States. And if the South does not accept what is now offered in the constitutional amendment, Congress will be extremely likely to go back to first principles and settle the whole matter in a far simpler way than that now presented The North will be satisfied with the amendment, but if the South refuses it she shall try the medicine of Thaddeus Stevens She has a horror of confiscation and negro suffrage and she not has power over these questions Prudence, however, would dictate that she exercise a care lest she should lose control of them

The original "cock and bull story" excellent as performance as that is, is now far outdone by a story the Copperhead papers are telling about late "attempt to assassinate the President at Indianapolis" The truth is the riot on the occasion of the President's visit to that city was begun by the Democracy An investigation of the affair established this fact The first shot was fired by one of the harmless "Sons of Liberty," and of the dozen persons injured in the melee, there was but a single Copperhead among them All the rest were Union men And with these facts before them, the Copperheads endeavor to cook up a "Radical plot" to assassinate their "Moses" The whole affair grew out of an attack of the Copperheads upon the Union men, which is sufficiently proved by the fact that nearly all who were injured were of the latter party

PUGET SOUND CUSTOM HOUSE—The Seattle Weekly says the instructions to the Puget Sound Collector of Customs to transfer the Port of Entry from Port Angelos to Port Townsend are now on their way from Washington by mail, and the change will be effected immediately upon their arrival,

The arrangements under which the Associated Press of California—the Union, Bulletin and Alta—have long been enjoying a monopoly of the overland telegraphic dispatches, will terminate on the 1st of November After that date all the newspapers of California will receive the dispatches, which have wherewithal to pay for them

THE LEGISLATURE AND THE PRESS—Some of the members of the House took offense, or pretended to take offense at an article in the Oregonian one day last week, and took occasion to enter on a question of privilege and speak in terms of censure of that paper The Oregonian is amply able to take care of itself, and we do not propose to speak for it, but we cannot let the opportunity pass without expressing our disapprobation of an effort whether intentional or not by certain gentlemen to muzzle the Press Union papers have been remarkably lenient toward certain gentlemen in this Legislature, whose acts would not bear very well the light of investigation in certain matters which relate to the interest of the party which they claim to belong When gentlemen take up the gudgel and attack an independent newspaper, they need not complain if they receive a Rowland for an Oliver' —Unionist

BILLS.

Mr OLNEY, from the Judiciary Committee reported without recommendation on the bill to exclude certain persons from testifying as witnesses Also for the bill to extend the remedy by attachment and abolish imprisonment for debt, substituting the bill introduced in parts which substitutes were adopted. Ordered engrossed.

Mr HUMASON from the special committee to whom was referred the bill to increase the compensation of certain officers—assessors and county auditors—reported said substitute which was adopted and ordered engrossed

Mr WHITE, from the committee on the license law, reported an substitute requiring license for the sale of spirituous liquors in less quantities than one quart, and for the sale of malt liquors in less quantities than one gallon which were adopted. Ordered engrossed

Mr. WHITE also reported a bill to amend the city charter, to enable the Common Council to construct sewers by the assessment plan as streets are now imposed

Messrs DUNIWAY and HUMASON objected that the proposed amendments would give the Council power to force holders of city property on Front street, near the old Penitentiary to make an unreasonable expenditure for improving the streets adjacent to the gulch A motion was made to exempt such property

Mr UPTON urged that under the charter the property in question could not be assessed for its improvement against the will of two thirds of the holders of it. He did not believe the amendment asked for was designed to effect this especial object, but to remove embarrassments in the city. He hoped the amendment would not prevail but was willing to accept the bill with it.

Mr WHITE wanted the original bill or nothing

The amendment was adopted and the bill was then considered engrossed.

Mr McCOY, from the committee on the bill to admit attorneys to practice in the Circuit Court, reported an amendment to prevent such attorneys from practicing in other Districts without admission therein Ordered engrossed

Mr HENDERSHOTT offered a resolution allowing the page three dollars per diem for his services. Adopted.

Mr STARKWEATHER offered a joint resolution asking Congress to provide for extending surveys to the country west of the Cascade Mountains Adopted, 34 ayes to 5 nays.

Mr HENDERSHOTT offered a joint resolution to pay the Chief Clerk three dollars, and the Assistant Clerk two dollars a day extra for their services. Laid over under the rules

The bill reported from the Judiciary Committee, pursuant to instructions, to tax unexempted U S. bonds, was read a second time.

Mr HUMASON moved to amend so as to tax all U S. bonds, which was lost by 21 ayes to 22 nays. He then proposed to refer it to the Military Committee, (as that was a Democratic committee) which was refused

On motion of Mr NICKLIN under the previous question moved by Mr. Upton the bill was then indefinitely postponed by a vote of 22 ayes to 21 nays

Mr. HENDERSHOTT at 11.30 A M moved to adjourn till 9 o'clock P. M

Mr COX suggested that it be till after the Fair Messrs Upton Gingles and Nicklin opposed and urged the necessity of early and late sessions in order to attend to the large amount of business on hand.

At 11 A M, on motion of Mr. HUMASON, the House took a recess till 1 P M.

AFTERNOON

On motion of Mr. HUMASON, the Secretary of State was authorized to allow Hon M P Deady the use of the Journal of the Constitutional Convention for six months Judge Deady designs writing a history of the Constitution of Oregon.

The following bills were passed, viz

To dispense with the oath of allegiance required during the rebellion—29 ayes to 14 nays

To define the powers and limit the liabilities of Oregon City, by a unanimous vote

The bill to double the road tax—to increase it to one days' work for every thousand dollars' worth of property, etc—29 ayes to 11 nays

To provide for submitting to the people at the next general election the proposition to change the county seat of Baker county to Baker City

To prevent swine from running at large in Wasco county also a similar bill for Union county

To require county Treasurers instead of Sheriffs, to receipt to Chinamen, negroes and Kanakas for poll tax

To facilitate the collection of taxes in certain cases

To defray the expenses of the Polk county contest—25 ayes to 19 nays

To amend the law in relation to private corporators—32 ayes to 3 nays.

To affix the time for the meeting of the County Commissioners of Linn county

To change the time of working roads from the spring to the autumn months

To incorporate Dallas City—by 27 ayes to 7 nays.

To provide for the publication, distribution and return of road laws.

The bill to increase the salaries of the District Judges was lost—8 ayes to 22 nays

To pay Wm. Kapus for services as mustering officer—indefinitely postponed

Pending the consideration of a bill for the relief of Chas. Pleasants, at 5 15 P M adjourned to 7 P M

EVENING

The bill for the relief of Chas Pleasants was lost—22 to 17

Mr GINGLES offered a joint resolution to repeal the joint rule in relation to action upon bills during the last two days of the session Adopted

The bill regulating the salaries of County Judges, was further amended by increasing the salary of the Judge of Multnomah county from $500 to $700 and passed

The bill to incorporate the city of Harrisburg—32 ayes to 18 nays.

The bill to prevent law partners of District Attorneys from defending cases against such Attorneys passed—36 ayes to 4 nays.

The bill to pay the expenses of raising volunteers in 1801 was lost—31 to 20

The bills to amend the Charter of the city of Portland in regard to sewers, and also so as to place the election of the City Marshal in the hands of the people, and to give a salary of $300 to the Mayor and members of the Common Council passed—the former by a vote of 33 ayes to 4 nays and the latter unanimously

The bill to relieve Grant county of delinquent State tax on account of losses sustained from Indian depredations and from failure to collect tax from floating population was passed—29 ayes to 10 nays

Mr FOUDRAY, from the Committee on the bill to annex Josephine to Jackson county, presented an amendment to submit the matter to the people

The Senate joint resolution to meet in joint convention on Friday next at 10 o'clock M., for the purpose of electing a State Librarian was adopted

Mr LOCKHART asked leave of absence after Friday next which was granted

Mr HINDMAN at 8 45 moved to adjourn

Mr COX offered an amendment to adjourn till Friday at 7 o clock Adopted

Mr GINGLES offered an amendment to sit to-morrow afternoon and then adjourn till Friday 8 o'clock A M Messrs. UPTON OLNEY and CULNOWITH urged the necessity for improving all the remaining time of the session

Mr HUMASON said he and his Democratic friends desired to defeat the Registry Law and were therefore not anxious to work fast. If the law could now be indefinitely postponed he would feel more like going ahead

Mr OLNEY suggested that it might be postponed till Friday, and moved a special hour

Mr. HENDERSHOTT said he was not afraid of the law. There business and amendments were voted down and motion at one o'clock P M adjourned

A fire occurred in Victoria on the 9th inst., which destroyed one building and damaged another The total loss amounted to $5,000 The building which was destroyed was occupied by E R Shaw

Bankruptcy.—We have before spoken of the necessity for the organization of an association having for its object the protection of persons in a small size and suffering condition, and of persons in a small size and suffering condition, and the past week there has been a sad illustration of the need. Men who were entirely destitute of all property, and in debt, have been the recipients of those acts which prove a right generous and sympathy for those who are in deep distress. The true observing of this class, we observe in the [illegible] and in several instances [illegible] suffering has resulted from the want of proper well directed [illegible] arrangement on the part of the community at large. We have no doubt of [illegible] generous community and it is a shame that in our midst [illegible] should be suffering when there are so many who [illegible] to contribute to their relief. The leading [illegible] are directly would no doubt rather do it than not [illegible] would start which shall form a fund to be devoted to all [illegible] purposes, to be called upon daily by needy [illegible] as they arise. This work has to be done, and will [illegible] only to do it. It is useless for any to say there are no [illegible] charity—they can be found in all times. Only [illegible] a push to carry it on, and there is plenty yet [illegible] for the many benevolent associations that have been [illegible] for years and have done incalculable good [illegible] talking and writing about this will do no service. Let [illegible] well known citizens take hold of the matter, and [illegible] a prominent man in the city that will not [illegible] it. Who will take hold of the work?

Insurance.—We are indebted to Mr Jno Doland, [illegible] of this county for the following statement of the [illegible] able property of Multnomah county, for [illegible] 1866, as appears by reference to the tax list in [illegible] county clerk's office

The New Orleans Massacre---General Baird's Report.

[From the St. Louis Democrat, Sept. 18.]

Truth laughs at all attempts to exclude it. Neither locks nor bars nor bolts can keep it out; like the fresh air of heaven it forces its way through the key holes and crevices in spite of every obstacle. A party that undertakes to live by hiding the truth is doomed. All the powers of nature and of art combine to crush a lie.

Andrew Johnson should have reflected upon these things before undertaking to keep from the people the facts of the New Orleans massacre. Correspondents, private letters, and the burning words of living witnesses, conspired to crush the attempted deception. Sheridan's dispatches, suppressed for a time, were forced before the public by the persistent demand of General Grant, it is said, Official reports and private information agreed, and now the whole history of that infamous transaction is known to the world. Johnson's brazen-faced falsehoods, reiterated at this late day, only proves his desperation and utter disregard of truth, and intensify the indignation with which he is regarded by a wronged and insulted people.

If further proof is needed of the utter falsity of his assertions in regard to that transaction, it is found in the official report of General Baird, the military commander at the time. The length of the report, and the fact that its most material parts have already been published or substantially presented in this paper in other reliable accounts, lead us to give only such extracts from it as may show its tenor. It conclusively proves that the massacre had been deliberately planned by rebel authorities, who were encouraged in their infamous deed by the dispatch from Andrew Johnson. Indeed this is admitted, for the report says:

"Since the riot I have been informed by gentlemen of the highest character—planters of wealth and influence, belonging to the party inimical to the Convention—that the question of its meeting had been by them fully discussed in all its bearings; that it had been proposed, first, to treat it with ridicule, next to go into the movement, and by superior numbers, to send delegates to overwhelm and control it. But upon reflecting that the members already elected would be the judges as to the qualifications of new ones, it was feared that this purpose might be frustrated, and it was then determined to treat the meeting as an unlawful assemblage, and as such to break it up at all hazards."

The General then presents the correspondence with Mayor Monroe, already published, in which the Mayor announced his intention to break up the assembly, and the General replied that the Mayor had no right to decide the assembly unlawful or to do any thing but protect its members from violence. The violent and inflammatory charge of Judge Abell is also mentioned, as calculated to cause an outbreak, and of him the report says:

"To the Major General commanding the division, who has had so much longer time to observe the character of the prominent men of this community, I need not speak of the unscrupulous character of this gentleman, as displayed in his official capacity. We have only to lament that we find in this position a person ready to pervert the sanctity with which we all wish to enshroud the law to the accomplishment of political party ends."

The report then gives a detailed account of interviews of the Mayor with the General, in which the former repeatedly avowed his purpose of breaking up the Convention and arresting its members under the form of law as dispersed by Abell, and sought to obtain a pledge that the General would not interfere with his proceedings. The General then sent the following telegram:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF LOUISIANA,
NEW ORLEANS, (La.,) July 28, 1866.

To the Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War, Washington, (D. C.):

A Convention has been called with the sanction of Gov. Wells, to meet here on Monday. The Lieutenant Governor and city authorities think it unlawful, and propose to break it up by arresting the delegates. I have given no orders on the subject, but have warned the parties that I should not countenance or permit such action without instructions to that effect from the President.

A. BAIRD,
Brevet Major General Commanding.

Please instruct me by telegraph.

On the same day the following dispatch from the President himself was received, not directed to General Baird, lest he might not publish it, but to the rebel Lieutenant Governor, by whom it was at once sent to the papers:

WASHINGTON, July 28, 1866.

Albert Voorhees, Lieutenant Governor of Louisiana—Sir: The military will be expected to sustain, and not obstruct or interfere with the proceedings of the Courts. A dispatch on the subject of the Convention was sent to Governor Wells this morning.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

The General comments as follows:

"The journals which published the dispatch referred to, commenting upon it, remarked that while the Department commander would doubtless give any assistance that might be required to the civil officers in breaking up the Convention, that none would be asked for as none would be required."

It is unnecessary for us to say that this dispatch, so plainly intended to stop the troops from giving any protection to the threatened assembly, and to encourage the rebels in their intended massacre, fixes upon the President a responsibility for those murders which he can never shake off. General Baird spends some space in defending himself from the charge of having neglected necessary preparations to meet and prevent the massacre, but the President's dispatch, taken in connection with those of Sheridan, put that matter in the right light. The General shows, however, that the Mayor and other rebel authorities gave him distinctly to understand that they had understood all intention of arresting the Conventionists was not legal process, and the General, not expecting so high-handed a proceeding as a mob and massacre, engineered by these same authorities, anticipated no interference whatever with the Convention. The riot then commenced, and the General being informed of it, sent messengers for the troops. The next item of information is regarding the Mayor:

"Mayor Monroe came in hurriedly a little after two o'clock, and enquired 'when the troops I proposed to bring up would arrive.' I replied that by that very time they should be on Canal street. He then asked, rather anxiously, 'Will they be white troops?' 'Will they act along with my police?' I replied that I would have some white troops, and that I would suppress the riot, no matter who were engaged in it. The interview lasted but a few moments, and these three interrogations, together with my replies to him, constituted the substance of the entire conversation which passed between us on the occasion. They furnish a key to what was passing in his mind at a time when he knew his police had gone beyond all bounds that could be justified by people of any party, and felt the heavy weight which responsibility for their acts would impose upon those accountable for them."

Of the riot itself the General states that "the most trustworthy evidence shows" that the procession of negroes was first fired upon from a restaurant on Canal street; that in the procession only one man in front had a pistol; and that the disturbance in the street was easily stopped and ammunted to nothing. Then large bodies of "police" were seen marching straight upon the Convention hall. The report says:

"These bodies of police are said to have been summoned to the spot by the ringing of the city bells. Everything shows preconcerted action. The police, armed with pistols and clubs, followed and supported by citizens, charged upon the negroes, having given no notice to disperse, and having made no attempt to peaceably arrest them. There was a pile of bricks at hand, and the colored people defended themselves with those and their sticks, as well as with such pistols as they had, less than one to every tenth man. They were soon overpowered, and those who could do so found a refuge within the Convention hall. The building was afterwards assulted, the police firing their pistols into the windows, and when an entrance was effected they forced their way up the landing on the second story, and there found the door of the hall barricaded.

"At length, by some strategy, those in the hall were induced to open the door, when the police rushed in and emptied their revolvers into the assemblage. Those within, being feebly armed, could make but little resistance, and the policemen, retiring to reload, returned to repeat the same operation. When any of the Conventionists succeeded in being passed out to the front of the building, they were met by a cordon of citizens, and attempting to surrender to the first, they were frequently shot down by the men whom they begged to take them into custody. This course was continued until the work was completed.

"During the riot a fire company arrived in the rear of the building, by which passage many were trying to escape, and at once halted to unite with the policemen there, and take part in the work of slaughter. Other large bodies of police, regularly organized, also came in from the station-houses, sooner or later, to unite with the forces engaged. It is also reported that men were passed through the crowd by friendly policemen, who tied about their necks white handkerchiefs as an evidence that they belonged to some of the organizations of citizens present. I do not report these things as perfectly correct in every particular, for I hold my judgment in abeyance until details can be had to that evidence, which the Commission will adduce. They are, however, credibly reported to me, and they leave no room to doubt that the riots of the 30th ult. present a picture of atrocity having no parallel in American history.

"At the time when I located the troops in the center of the city, and cleared the crowd from the adjacent streets, I was of course ignorant of most of the particular incidents, but the evidence was clear before me that the police had been faithless to their duty, and had been riotous throughout; that in truth it led the riot, and it was therefore necessary to take this force under control. All negroes, and Union citizens of Louisiana, and all Northern men, so far as I could learn, were in a state of terror. The approach of a policeman they regarded as that of an executioner. Prominent citizens sought refuge or concealment in the houses of friends, and even the Governor of the State, during the night, sent for a guard to protect his life. For days subsequent to the riot, the meeting of two or three policemen near the house of a Union man was regarded as sufficient to justify a removal at night or a demand for a military guard."

Some hours after the riot, the work of arresting, not the rioters, but the members of the Convention, was commenced by the city authorities, and the General stopped it. He was thereupon ordered by the President not "to interpose any obstacle in the way of the civil authorities," and in consequence the arrests proceeded. The report says:

"Against many there were no charges whatever, and against no one was it charged that he had been necessary to the killing of any one during the day. I have yet likewise to learn that a single individual of those hostile to the Convention had been attacked. In order to ascertain the number killed and wounded on either side, I have caused Surgeon Hartsuff, United States Army, to make an investigation and report. He called upon the proper city officials for their statement, and has sought for information in every quarter. No doubt there were men killed and wounded concerning whom he could obtain no information. The following is his report: Total number killed, 38; severely injured, 68; slightly injured, 93; pistol wounds, 58; incised wounds, 54; contusions, 54; total, 214.

"This exposition of thirty-seven certainly and two more probably killed on the side of the Convention, against a single citizen on the side of this authorities; of forty-eight severely wounded on the side of the Convention, and not a single man in that category upon the other side, and of eighty-eight certain and twenty more probable cases of slight wounds among the friends of the Convention, and but ten such cases among the police and its friends, is highly significant.

"Most of those killed, received one or more pistol shots, and of the wounded, Dr. Hartsuff found fifty-one such wounds on the part of the Convention party against seven on the part of the police.

"All of this goes to establish which party was armed and organized, and which exercised the violence, notwithstanding that nearly every policeman swears that they were generally unarmed and that he did not use a shot fired by them."

One more extract is important, as it forms of itself the most conclusive reply to the assertions of Johnson and his tools, the rebel officials. The report says:

"Judge Howell, the President, whom I have since asked why they did not notify me of their danger, replied that they had no conception of it themselves; he and the rest went there unarmed, not sure that they might not be arrested or the meeting otherwise broken up, but with no idea that they would be subjected to violence. The large body of police belonging to the city was amply competent at any time, by thrusting itself between the two antagonistic parties, to separate them and arrest quietly the disorderly on both sides. It was strong enough to have held a force equal to both the parties in the streets in subjection until the hour when the troops held in reserve could come up. Indeed, there was no hour during the continuance of the riot when perfect order might not have been restored by a command to the police from its chiefs to put up their pistols, and turn round to request its friends and coadjutors in the work of riot to desist, to clear the streets, and return to their homes. That the police force itself, the chosen guardian of the law, the conservator of public peace, should become the terrible rioter which it did was not to be calculated upon. We knew that there were bad men in that organization, and that its feelings were hostile to the Convention; but we believe them subject to the control of their officers, and, with all our knowledge of the depravity of the human heart, we could not have imagined them capable of such atrocities as were committed by them and their friends against helpless negroes and Union white people."

Every candid reader will admit that it is not at all strange, in view of these facts, that the President attempted to suppress Sheridan's dispatches, or that he dislikes when people ask him "How about New Orleans?"

PRUSSIAN GLORIFICATION.—The Provincial Correspondent of Berlin of August 28th (Bismarck's paper) has the following:

Prussia owes these grand results to the war she has just been waging. She has obtained for herself an extension and a rounding off of territory which enables her to use more efficaciously her position as a great Power. She has united the whole of Northern Germany to the Main in a military and political confederation, well bound together by a strong and active German power. She has become the only great directing Power in Germany, and the whole of Germany, if she wishes it, can to participate in the development and the national power; is obliged to lean upon Prussia and the Northern Confederacy."

The direct and immediate aggrandizement of Prussia is of itself so important that even in history, so admirably fortunate for country, there is no instance like it. During a reign of forty-eight years the Great Elector did increase the Prussian State by only five hundred and fifty square miles and about half a million of inhabitants. Frederick the Great acquired only six hundred and eighty-eight square miles and about one million of inhabitants. In spite of all the sacrifices she made in the war of deliverance (1813, '14 and '15), there was did not bring to Prussia all that she ceded away by the peace of Tilsit, and she had then five hundred and sixty-one square miles less than she possessed theretofore. The war which we just concluded increases Prussia by three hundred square miles and more and a half million inhabitants—that is, by about one-fourth of her former possessions. Never has Prussia, since her existence, received an augmentation so important as this by the last war. Not until now could she maintain the position of a great Power as created by Frederick the Great, except on the condition of straining too much the power of her people. She has now, by roundlug off her territory in the center and north of Germany, and by acquiring a natural base in land as well as in population, become really a grand Power.

"When Johnson left here last Saturday he forgot to settle the tavern bill for himself and his suite of cloquers. His overnight in this little matter is somewhat unaccountable—particularly as he fully understood that the city had emphatically declined to receive him as its guest. The Committee of reception, if they do not like his conduct, should at once jog his memory on that point. There is no reason in the world why, under the circumstances, his traveling expenses should be defrayed by the city; and if his particular friends, who so urgently invited him here, are unwilling to "pay for the music," the bill should at once be forwarded to him at Washington for settlement. Our understanding at the time was that Johnson's especial friends repudiated the entire action of the City Council, and organized an invitation and reception "by the citizens" entirely on their own hook; for this purpose going around with a subscription paper and collecting funds from whom they might. It is decidedly singular that they should now attempt to pocket the proceeds of their collection and saddle the whole thing on the City Council for payment. It looks very much as though, in their estimation the wind "hadn't paid"—and they are trying to crawl out of it as cheaply as possible. Poor Andy Johnson, to be invited to Springfield and then have his tavern bills repudiated by his followers! What a scandal! What a reflection upon the great Andy Johnson party of the Capitol. We advise Johnson to send on a check for the amount at once, and have the matter hushed up."

HOBSTICKS ON BILLIARDS.—I need hardly tell you that the game of billiards consists of punching ivory balls about on a big table covered with green cloth, that looks like half an acre of meadow land, with an india rubber fence around it, that the balls are punched with long wooden ramrods, with wax on the end to save the wood, and leather put on to save the wax, and chalk put on to save the leather from wearing out. You take your ramrod and rub some chalk on the little end; then you lean over the table; then you squint; and you lift up your leg; then you fiddle a little on your left hand with your ramrod; then you punch your ball; if your ball runs against the other man's ball, you've done a big thing, and you make up a lot of buttons that are strung on a wire. This is all there is of the game of billiards. Anybody can punish billiards.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE OF THE PRUSSIAN PREMIER.—The Berlin correspondent of the New York World gives the following description of Bismark, the great Premier:

In Berlin, the man who could get no friendly hand two months ago to disturb its appearance is the miracle to-day. And this brings me to the central personage of Europe, who has risen by success from detestation to fame. His picture is by this time in all your shop windows; but they do not convey the height of the man with his proportions, nor make him speak as I have heard him to-day. Barbaric in stature as in method—measuring evenly six feet two inches in height, and weighing not less than 250 pounds—Count Bismark is entirely a Prussian in physiognomy, and his port and strength are feudal in their unparliamentary. Seated in an office chamber of the great Schloss, or King's palace, with clerks in the ante-rooms, couriers in spurs at the hall, ready to carry his orders, a table before him filled with blanks, reports and newspapers, and the lights from the screened windows falling fairly on his seated figure, you behold, in common business dress, a man who might pass for 50 years of age, half-bald, smooth of face, save a short and heavy moustache of grayish brown that quite overlooks the hard shut, ponderous mouth, and a nose of insignificant length, but broad and pearl nostrilled. His flesh is in excess, so that around the eyes it is puffy and creased, and his short, stony, undimpled chin drops a huge double fold upon his breast. His eyebrows are jagged; if they were heavier over those blood-clotted eyes, he would be terrible. At the back of his deep cheeks a pair of stiff bulldog's ears stand out to stop all the winds and their rumors, and his hands and feet, that are deformed even in rest, are large enough to win a woman's posture. So dark that he looks like Murray from the light, so lustful and yet so massive that he looks like a panther in granite, this man would better befit a baron's trencher, where his vassals eat and tremble than sit here on the naked floors of a modern palace, doing desk duty.

I expected that he would remind me of Stanton, but he much resembled Butler. Stand General Butler on a chair to help his stature, prop his eyes open and give him power, and you have the nearest resemblance of Count Bismark that I can think of among American leaders. Near by him, on a rosewood table, lay a Prussian officer's helmet, and if he had put it on I think that Front de Boeuf would have been before me in armor.

A steam railway to the summit of Mount Washington is being built. The track has two smooth rails, and between them lies a wrought iron ladder, in which the fingers of the cogged driving wheel take hold and climb up. The ascent is one foot in three.

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be in the possession of everybody in the mining regions. As a preventive of the various dangerous diseases to which the gold seeker is liable, it has no superior. While it is quite palatable even as a beverage, it is speedy and powerful in its effects upon the system. In all cases of Diarrhœa, Dysentery, and the pertubing fevers consequent upon exposure, the Bitters will be found invaluable as a corrective. No man should enter upon the exposed life of a miner without being provided with Hostetter's preventive of stomach disease, nor should any of those who are now engaged in the occupation, fail to have recourse to the Bitters. Sold by all druggists and dealers everywhere. se1,20 HODGE & CALEF, 97 Front St.

SOMETHING NEW!
THE New LIGHT!
DANFORD'S
Atmospheric Coal Oil Gas Lamp!

A RTIFICIAL LIGHT OF SOME SORT, IS A UNIversal necessity. A Safe, Cheap and Brilliant one is a Luxury—a luxury only enjoyed heretofore by those who live in large cities where Gas is used. Years of study and much capital have been exhausted in experiments to produce a lamp wherein the ordinary Kerosene or Coal Oil could be used without a chimney, and without unpleasant odor while in use. That fruitful source of expense, trouble and annoyance, the chimney, is by DANFORD'S COAL OIL GAS LAMP avoided; it is the most perfect Lamp and will entirely supersede all other Coal Oil Lamps; it is the cheapest artificial light that can be used, yielding the light of an ordinary six foot Gas burner for less than ½ cent per hour, or double the quantity of light of an ordinary Chimney Lamp, for one third the cost. It will burn when turned down to a taper light, ten hours for a cent, is free from smoke, can be carried from room to room and the wick will not blow it out. Three LAMPS will be on exhibition and for sale at the Music and Art Gallery of Shanahan & Dufleux, corner of Morrison and First streets.

THAT OLD GREENBACK CASE!

I am still obliged to accept of Legal Tender Notes at Par (and have been since Dec. 17, 1862,) for the rent of my Handsome Brick Store, corner of Morrison and Front streets, I feel compelled to announce for the benefit of the public, that
JACOB MAYER
Leased the building on the Feb. 17, 1862, for a term of years, at which time there was no such currency in vogue, and it was understood the terms were Cash. Since the date above stated, I have received the depreciated currency regularly for the rent of the making less than two-fifths of the real amount said Mayer was to get. He had secured the building at very advantageous rates, and even were he now to comply with his contract, and pay in Coin, would be getting the best bargain in the city. I make this statement to show the public what kind of a man he must be to take such undue advantages of the times to convert a few dollars to himself by LEGAL SWINDLING. The public can readily see how much it costs to have such tenants in such costly buildings as the one referred to above.
CITY OF PARIS STORE!
